

Abstract

The invention provides a method for presenting visual information about real property to a prospective buyer or other viewer. The method provides the viewer with the opportunity to understand the orientation of a particular view of an object within a property in terms of the position of that object within or outside the property. The invention is especially useful for providing information regarding real property and the surrounding environment by means of virtual tour that limits the necessity of participating in significant travel to personally view individual properties.